

The image shows a page from a medieval manuscript. On the right side, there is a large, detailed illustration of a plant with a thick, textured stem and several large, green, fan-shaped leaves. The leaves have prominent white veins and appear to be ruffled at the edges. To the left of the plant, there is a large amount of handwritten text in a dark brown or black ink, arranged in two columns. The text is written in a Gothic script and appears to be a pharmacological or botanical treatise. There are several instances of red ink used for headings, initials, and some marginalia. The overall appearance is that of a well-preserved historical document.
